

This week in Maths, we have been working hard on Fractions for the first time this half term. If you are looking for additional work to complete at home, this is always a topic that needs lots of practice on IXL.

In English, we focused heavily this week on writing from different perspectives. We used emotive language and rhetorical questions to consider August's perspective on his new life at school, and how this might differ from the perspective of his parents or friends. Next week, we will use role play to explore this further before writing a diary entry.

Swimming for both Year 6 classes is now over, and we will go back to our Gymnastics and Netball units, and we will be running a Netball tournament in the coming weeks as a chance for children to win points for their house groups.

Have a lovely weekend and a good rest before the final two weeks of the half term!
